Tonight, Sam Worthington will play himself in a cameo role in "A Quiet Place" (opening in theaters on April 20), which also features Emily Blunt and Cillian Murphy. "People ask me a lot, 'When are you going to make a sequel to 'Avatar'?' I'm like, 'I'm not a sequel guy,'" Worthington said in a recent interview. "It's too weird to think of something that is a sequel, because I feel like my job as a character actor is to keep reinventing myself. "I really believe in that, so I don't have any plans to do it." But he has no problem playing himself in a small part in a new movie. "I think it was a great thing to do. In a way, I think it has a kind of vanity project, you know what I mean? Like you'd want to do something like that." Worthington said he thinks of himself as a character actor. "It's not like I do movies for the money," he said. "I don't have a particular desire to act in other people's films. It's like a job to me. But in that job, I love what I do and there's a sort of joy to it. "I've been able to keep that under control and not let it get in the way of my actual life." Meanwhile, this is the last we'll see of Worthington in the "Avatar" franchise. He was originally set to return as his character Jake Sully in the sequel "Avatar 2" before having a "back in five 1d6a3396d6

I want to define a prototype which I can reuse in every constructor function. So far I did this: function SomeClass() { var _this = this; var a = function() { _this.info = some info; } } SomeClass.prototype.b = function() { // does something with _this.info } Now I want to include the prototype of the constructor function within the SomeClass prototype so I can use it from every SomeClass. I tried this: function SomeClass() { this.a = function() { this.info = some info; } } SomeClass.prototype = SomeClass.prototype.constructor; SomeClass.prototype.b = function() { // does something with _this.info } But this does not work because SomeClass.prototype.constructor is
